PLAIN AND FANCY
BOOK AND JOB PRINTING
BY H. L. SHELDON, VISITING, BUSINESS AND ADDRESS
CARDS printed in the highest style of the art.

The following lines were written soon after the planting of the top of Punchbowl Hill with trees, but have never before been in print.

Dream of Punchbowl Hill.
I had a dream, a very pleasant dream,
A dream that like the dulcet tones of song
Leaves music's echo on the tumbled air;
A phantom picture which the brain unfolds
Amidst the darkest shadows of the night,
And when 'tis gone the image still remains
In memory's chambers; or perchance impressed
A transient outline stamped upon the mind:
I dreamed a park was planted on my brow,
A verdant grove clothed and cooled my head,
White gurgles flowing from the top of the air;
Daisy sparkling fountains murmured, leaping the trees
Or danced with joy, reflecting silver beams
That played upon their surface; and gay birds
Of bright and golden plumage flattered near
Or sang their merry carols to the breeze;
The mountain breeze was cooled by flood and shade,
Where mountain winds came sighing thro' the leaves
That quivered gently with the breath of life;
While far above hung a canopy
The result of space—the soft blue tropic sky,
In which moved cloudlets white as driven snow;
No dotted far above the happiness and peace
Which mingled there—the scene itself repelled
All rule and sober gloom; nature smiled
On gorgeous beauty that never lent
An angel from above to tread earth's soil,
Where high above the surface of our globe
Remote from vice but not far from the stars,
The distant sound of Ocean faintly heard
Mixed with the murmur of the fountain near;
Lovers were seated in ambrosial bowers,
And told their tale in hushed and sweet tones;
Untrammelled by the cares of Earth, beneath
For here was all that heart could wish desire,
Love, beauty, peace and all the countless joys
Of nature's blessings, felt thro' sight and sound;
Dewy had not yet wearied to retire
When gently from upon the youthful grove,
All spring and life; the flowers and foliage fresh,
The thickening growth but tempered light and heat,
Sweet sounds of love and nature's melody
Spread and re-echoed over lower and path,
And, lighted by celestial beams, subdued
Were all aromas of my fairy dream:
A vision of the night that glided grand
But faded ere I saw it all; and Heaven
And spread her brightening beams upon my sight;
The rich enchantment vanished from my gaze,
Like some gay pleasure that may charm awhile,
Then fly and leave behind the pleasant state
That pleasures do leave; but 'twas a dream,
Only a dream that spread a phantom show,
A nothing, harmless as the air we breathe.
Yet came a sadness resting on my heart;
I missed the expectation, and I sighed
To have it back; for with the breaking dawn,
And long before the monkey-pod had spread
Its tender leaves to greet the breath of morn;
Before the early bird had sung its note
To taste the dewy sweets of opening flowers;
My phantom park was gone, and in its place
Were stretched to view upon my barren sods
Large clumps of grass and ferns on my path;
That spoiled the even smoothness of my scalp;
The cattle browsed upon my withered turf
As they had browsed of yore; and near at hand
A mounded lumber skeleton stood;
Cin cases, broken bottles and the like;
A motley of barrels, cans and dishes
In fragments strewn unsightly place within;
While sagging, penes, (conspicuously perhaps)
Lay dead and dry. As seen by early light,
Ah! what a contrast to my gorgeous dream
That thus devolved to monuments of wreck
And rubbish rotting on ignominious ground.

Honolulu, 1876.

VARIETY.
It was an Irishman who wrote to Mr. Plimsoll to ask if a coffin ship could not always be distinguished in the water by the wake after it.

A Nashville man answered a Chicago advertisement, "How to win at poker," and received for his two dollars the following: "Hold four aces or don't poke."

It is easy to tell when others are flattered, but not when we ourselves are; and every man and woman will find firm belief in the self.

Of the very man they believe to be an arrogant flatterer when others are in the case.

Old man Boggs wished to make some slight repairs on the top of his residence, near Cincinnati, and for this purpose had occasion to tear up a few shingles. In doing so in a quiet and unobtrusive manner he was astonished to find that he had disturbed a hornet's nest.

The hornets swarmed out on Mr. Boggs. They made it hot for him at the very first onslaught, and he rushed for the ladder, attached from behind, when, horror of horrors! a neighbor had borrowed his ladder!

Mr. Boggs cowered, he tumbled, he rolled from one end of the roof to the other, screaming as he went, "Ladder! ladder!" The hornets continued to increase; they flew at his nose, his ears, his cheeks; they danced on his forehead, they crawled down his back, they flew up his breeches leg, they met half way and fought each other; they stung him everywhere, everywhere.

Boggs, wild with gesticulations and terrific shouts attracted the attention of the whole neighborhood. His friends mistook the shouts of "ladder!" for "hornets!" for "Tilden and Hendricks!" and thought he was rallying, but so much serious news was depicted on his face that a ladder was finally procured and a rescue effected. Mr. Boggs is laid up for repairs now, and his face looks like the newspaper pictures of a defeated prize fighter.

The man who gave odds.—After a strange man had finished eating a hearty meal at one of the stands in the City-Hall market yesterday, he remarked to the woman:

"As I was sitting down to this meal I said to myself that I'd bet $1 against the dinner that the Greenback candidates would not carry a single State. If they do you have won the $1 and shall have it."

"I want 35 cents of you," she replied, pulling off her bonnet.

"Or I'll bet you $5 against the meal that the Democrats carry New York State," he continued.

"I want my pay or there'll be trouble right here," she exclaimed, slipping off her bonnet.

"Or I'll bet the same sum, on the same terms, that the Republicans will carry it," he remarked, as he wiped off his sandy forehead.

"I never bet, and I won't pay!" she called out, having now all ready for action.

"Great Heavens! but look at the odds I offer you?" he gasped. "I not only let you bet on either side, but I offer you the most fearful odds that have ever been given since the advent of the Christian era!"

"I can't bet the odds," she answered as she got hold of his coat-tails. "You don't leave here till I get my money."

"Or, I'll bet you $35 against this 35 cent debt," he went on, "that neither Hayes nor Tilden will be elected. One of them must be, but I offer to bet they won't, simply to permit you to coin $35 out of her earnings. Great Jigs! but another offer was never known since Oliver Cromwell kept a fighting dog."

"Thirty-five cents!" she shrieked, pulling him around.

"Last, but not least, I'll bet you forty to one that I haven't had 35 cents about me for a month! Come, now, I offer you every chance to win."

She gave him two solid kicks, and was designing and drafting a third, when he made a bolt and left a coat-tail in her grasp. While an officer was looking for him around the market he was plucking the soldiers' Monument and picking his teeth with a straw.
